

Blue Atlas Cedars

Two towering blue atlas cedars stand on the South side of the Cathedral on either side of the entrance to the Norman Court.

These came as seedlings from Palestine. Reportedly, they were carried to the United States in a suitcase at the turn of the last century. This genus of cedar is native to the Blue Atlas Mountains of Morocco and offers an example of plants botanically related to the Holy Land.